THE BURNED REGION IN MICHIGAN.

[From the Detroit Evening News.]

The general outline of the lower peninsula of the State of Michigan, as seen on the maps, bears a striking resemblance to a huge mitten—the deep indentation of Saginaw Bay into the heart of the State, aiding the fancied shape and marking off the thumb, as it were, a portion known as the Huron peninsula.

As it is in this so-called Huron peninsula where the heaviest of the forest fires of this memorable week have occurred, a few words about the country devastated may not be out of place.

The Huron peninsula consists of the counties of Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola, which have an aggregate population of 72,109, whose aggregate of material wealth as represented by the equalization of personal and real property is over $17,000,000. No part of the State of Michigan has been less reluctant to yield itself to the hand of material progress than has this peninsula, and yet so dense has been the growth of timber in the swamps and along the water-courses of Sanilac and Huron that the work of entering upon and developing the country has been slow and tedious, and after the lumbermen had stripped the land of its treasures of pine there were many years when the progress of opening the interior, back from the shore farms and towns, was by no means strongly marked.

The State was loth to believe that there was any use in building "State roads" through those counties, or that it would pay to drain the huge swamps, and the consequence was that until within a few years the population of Huron and Sanilac counties was chiefly along the shores of Lake Huron and Saginaw Bay. Travel into and through those counties was difficult and uncomfortable, and outwardly there was little to attract the attention of settlers, but gradually the tide of immigration stole up the water ways, roads were opened, farms cleared, lands drained by State and County aid, and when the year 1871 opened it found Huron, Sanilac and northern and northeastern Tuscola rapidly filling up with hardy Polish and Canadian settlers, with here and there a down east Yankee or sturdy Scandinavian family. Up to that time these settlers had not accumulated much property, but all they had was there, and when the scourge of fire in 1871 drove them into the lake, hundreds and thousands of them were left beggars, with nothing they could call their own but their lands and certain ash heaps that showed where once their homes had been. The close of 1873 found the most of them as well off as they were before—and in many cases even better off—for the open-handed charity of the State and Nation had re-housed, re-clothed and re-encouraged them, and had also re-stocked their farms, while the fire had in hundreds of cases been a blessing in disguise, clearing thousands of acres, much to the betterment of hundreds of land holders—for your average emigrant is not much of a woodsman, and it takes a generation of them to evolute from "grubbers" to choppers.

Prosperity has since smiled upon this region, a new railroad has penetrated its inner fastnesses, farms, good roads, schoolhouses, churches, cross-road hamlets, and railroad stations have sprung up as if by magic from amid the jungle. Sanilac and Huron counties have each removed their county seats from the extreme outer limits of their respective holdings to central, interior points where good county buildings and prosperous towns have suddenly grown (and where, alas, one of these towns has more suddenly been licked up in the flames).

And this was the condition of this district up to the awful change of September, 1881. Prosperous, growing, developing its unsurpassed agricultural resources with one hand, and with the other beckoning and welcoming further immigration from across the waters.

The news columns of this paper have since Monday last been telling the awful tale of the terrible devastation that has fallen upon the people of this region. Nothing like it has ever befallen a similar community in these United States. Looking over the published reports one sees that the fires must have originated in the immediate region about the northwestern townships of Sanilac and over the boundary in Huron county. The well-known carelessness of settlers in the work of burning summer fallows for the purpose of clearing land is the prime factor to which the horror will be justly charged. The spread of the flames was rapid, and the parched condition of the earth aided the work of destruction, and ere the people dreamed of danger the besom of destruction went roaring in every direction—east and north toward the lake shore, sweeping away farms, houses and live stock in the townships of Sheridan, Colfax, Verona, Bingham, Paris, Sand Beach, Sherman, Huron, Dwight and Meade, and west through Grant in Huron county; south and southwest through the towns of Greenleaf, Custer, Austin, Minden, Sanilac, Delaware, Marion, Argyle, Moore, Bridgehampton, Forester, Marlette, Flynn, Elk, Waterloo, Elmer, Buel, Maple Valley, Speaker, Fremont, Worth and Washington in Sanilac county—every township in that county, in short; west and south into Tuscola county, destroying the greater part of the townships of Elmwood, Elkland and Novesta and the village of Cass City, then backing east again across the Cass river into Sanilac, where it met another division of the winged army of destruction and their union resulted in a vast tornado of flame which even the most unimaginative beholders, describe as the most awful sight ever beheld. This vast hurricane of smoke and flame surged back and forth like a drunken demon of devastation for twelve hours; and when its fury was spent, over two thousand families were homeless and hundreds of men, women and children lay dead, burned and festering in the path of its awful revelry. Let us mark its pathway more clearly. Every township of the western and northern tiers of towns in Sanilac county was reached. Of the second tier from the western boundary Austin, Argyle and Moore were burnt black, and in Elmer along the roads great damage was done. Flynn, Maple Valley and Speaker suffered loss. Elk, Marion and Minden of the third tier saw awful wreck, Cato, in Delaware township, was utterly destroyed; the west half of Forester and also a strip two miles wide through it from west to east. So much for Sanilac and Huron generally, while incidentally come the stories of the burning of Deckerville, Richmondville, Anderson, Elmer, Tyre, Cato and Croswell, in Sanilac county, and Forest Bay, Huron City, Bad Axe, (the county seat) and Verona in Huron county.

Thus it is seen that the region swept over by the flames wholly or in part, embraces at least thirty-one townships, having a population of 51,000 but of which 500 to 600 are known or believed to have been burned to death in their homes, or on the roadside as they were fleeing for safety, or suffocated in wells, cellars and pits where they had crawled for shelter.

The picture is one that cannot be contemplated without a shudder, and "the fires of 1881" marks an epoch in the history of Michigan which God grant may never find a parallel.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Journal says that Benjamin Watson, of Portland, was cleaning off the roof of the Pavillion at North Auburn, Thursday morning, when he slipped and fell to the ground, injuring his spine so severely that a fatal result is feared.

A circular saw in the box factory of Messrs. A. Cushman & Co., Auburn, got its grip in a hand of Mr. Charles Tripp, a workman, Wednesday morning, and made fearful work with the fingers. The doctors had to finish sawing off two digits, and the others will be useless.

Cumberland.

A horse and buggy belonging to C. H. Moody, of Steep Falls, was stolen from Market square, Portland, Wednesday, where the owner left them standing, the horse carefully hitched.

Hancock.

A correspondent writes to the Lewiston Journal: John Parsons, of Eastbrook, in Hancock county, owns a farm of about 250 acres, about 150 acres of which is timber and wood land. About seventy-five years ago his father chose this spot in the then wilderness, for his home. His daughter, a sister of John Parsons, was the first female child born in town. The town now numbers about two hundred inhabitants. There is a saw mill, blacksmith shop and small store about one-half mile from his residence, also a church. He is very pleasantly situated on the so-called Parsons' Hill, overlooking some thirteen towns. The Tip-top House at Mount Desert is plainly visible. Sullivan, ten miles distant, is the nearest telegraph station. Mr. Parsons, now hale and hearty, is 82 years of age. Last season, prior to the 1st of January, during the logging season, up to that time, with the assistance of a little hired help he landed, for driving to the saw mill a short distance away, 75,000 feet of logs. The timber on this place is upon a side hill toward Scammon Pond, so that logging for him is comparatively easy. The logs are sawed into boards, plank or such as may be in demand and shipped. The lumber has to be carted to Frenchman's Bay, that being the nearest shipping point.

Kennebec.

The Journal says that the Independent Ice Co. are shipping ice, and will continue until their houses are cleared, at the rate of two thousand tons per week. E. D. Haley & Co. finish shipping their ice this week. They had about 20,000 tons stored. The Maine Ice Co., at Boothbay, are making extensive preparations for the winter's business. They are at work on three large houses, wharf, runs, piers, etc. The pond where they get their ice is considered one of the best on the coast, and promises great advantages for winter shipments especially.

While loading a separator at Whitman's agricultural works, Tuesday A. M., it fell from the upper story and was injured some $2,500 worth.

Somerset.

Mrs. Priscilla Eldridge, of Mercer, met with quite a severe accident, about one week since. She was assisting her husband, and from some mishap, hardly known to herself, her shoulder was thrown from the socket. Being somewhat advanced in years, and it being four hours before medical assistance could be obtained, it made the setting of the limb very painful. She is doing as well as could be expected.

A grandchild of Chas. Lisbon, of Anson, one day last week, while attempting to get into a cart while in motion, was hit by the cart, and the wheel passed over his leg, breaking it badly in two places.

Waldo.

The Journal says that the largest casting ever made at the Belfast foundry since the erection of the present building, was turned out on Saturday. It was the driving wheel to the engine now being set up at the foundry. The wheel is nine feet in diameter, twenty inches across the face of the rim and weighs nearly 4,000 pounds. Two kettles of melted iron, one holding 3,000 and the other 1,000 pounds, were used in the operation.

Waldo County Fair, to be held at Belfast, is to have a baby show.

Waldo County Council P. of H. met with Northern Light Grange, Winterport, Sept. 13th, with ten granges represented. The day was very pleasant and enjoyable. The attendance was large and a very profitable session was held. The exercises in the forenoon were a lecture by Worthy Lecturer, Bowen; essay by Sister F. W. Ritchie; recitation by Sister J. W. Lang. The reports from the various granges were very favorable, and shows the order to be in a live condition in Waldo county. It was voted to hold the next meeting with Morning Light Grange, Oct. 18th. The noon recess was enjoyed with a basket picnic, tea and coffee being furnished by Northern Light Grange. The afternoon exercises were a song by Sister Dyer, discussion of question, and music by the choir. Programme for next meeting: Report of granges, lecture by Worthy Master Bellows, essay by Sister R. B. Nealley, song by Sister Dyer; recess at noon; essay by Brother J. W. Lang, discussion of question: "Why is not agriculture equally represented with other interests in legislative bodies?" to be opened by Brother Frank Doloff and D. D. Gould, solo by Sister Flora Haley, and discussion of question.

The funeral of Mr. Ebenezer Ellwell took place from his residence, at South Brooks, where eight sons and two daughters were born to him. Two sons and two daughters took their departure by death, before him. Six remaining sons with wives and children mourn their loss. His bereaved wife has labored and worked under much weakness, hoping for his recovery. He was a soldier in the rebellion.

Potatoes are a failure in Brooks. They are small and rotting badly. Wheat proves good, also corn to those who have kept the weeds down.

THE MUSTER.

[From the Kennebec Journal.]

The muster of the militia this year has proved a pleasant occasion, and profitable when considered from the point of view of a soldier. To those who believe that our implements of war should be turned into implements of peace, that the sound of the drum should never be heard calling our citizens to arms, the muster field appears worse than useless, a preparation only for needless war and cruel destruction of human life. But those who contend that there is no necessity for preparation for defence against possible war in these times are not many. All would hail with pleasure the time when our spears might be beaten into pruning hooks, but that time is not yet, though it may occur in the future. We of this generation have felt the need of a well organized militia. Such as the militia of our country was in 1861, weak as our system was and poorly and grudgingly as it was maintained, it was our main dependence when war threatened the government, and taught us, poor as it was, that the country could trust the citizen soldiers for its defence if the militia were but properly organized and drilled in the rudiments of the school of arms. So our State government has wisely provided for these annual encampments as schools of instruction in a small way for the militia. And supported as they are by the zeal and indefatigable efforts of efficient officers, and the chivalric spirit and enthusiasm of our youthful soldiery, they accomplish excellent work though the time is very limited which the musters hold. If brought into actual war the men thus trained would soon acquire the facility in movement and the steadiness of veterans, the experience of the late war taught.

The muster has been a success. The weather has been propitious. The soldiers have acquitted themselves well. Good discipline has been maintained and the time thoroughly improved as the State designed in providing for these musters. The officers in command have discharged their duties faithfully, and may well feel gratified as the encampment breaks up with the results achieved. With proper and continued encouragement from the Legislature Maine will soon have a militia that its citizens may be proud of.

MEMORIES OF SECRETARY BLAINE'S BIRTH-PLACE.

LETTER READ AT THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF WASHINGTON COUNTY, PENN., LAST THURSDAY.

[From the N. Y. Tribune, Sept. 12.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 5, 1881.

Hon. T. McKENNAN, Esq., Washington, Penn.

DEAR SIR: I had anticipated great pleasure in being present at the centennial celebration of Washington County, but the National sorrow which shadows every household detains me here. I shall, perhaps, never again have the opportunity of seeing so many of the friends of my youth and so many of my blood and kindred, and you may well conceive that my disappointment is great.

The strong attachment which I feel for the county, the pride which I cherish in its traditions, and the high estimate which I have always placed on the character of its people, increase with years and with reflection. The pioneers were strong-hearted, God-fearing, resolute men, wholly, or almost wholly, of Scotch or Scotch-Irish descent. They were men who, according to an inherited maxim, never turned their backs on a friend or on an enemy. For twenty years dating from the middle period of the Revolution, the settlers were composed very largely of men who had themselves served in the Continental Army, many of them as officers, and they imparted an intense patriotism to the public sentiment. It may be among the illusions of memory, but I think I have nowhere else seen the Fourth of July and Washington's Birthday celebrated with such zeal and interest as in the gatherings I then attended. I recall a great meeting of the people on the Fourth of July, 1840, on the border of the county, in Brownsville, at which a considerable part of the procession was composed of vehicles filled with Revolutionary soldiers. I was but ten years old, and may possibly mistake, but I think there were more than two hundred of the grand old heroes. The modern cant and criticism which we sometimes hear about Washington not being, after all, a very great man, would have been dangerous talk on that day and in that assemblage.

These pioneers placed a high value on education, and while they were still on the frontier, struggling with its privations, they established two excellent colleges, long since prosperously united in one. It would be impossible to overstate the beneficent and wide-spread influence which Washington and Jefferson colleges have exerted on the civilization of that great country which lies between the Alleghanies and the Mississippi river. Their graduates have been prominent in the pulpit, at the bar, on the bench, and in the high stations of public life. During my service of eighteen years in Congress I met a larger number of the alumni of Washington and Jefferson than of any other single college in the Union. I make this statement from memory, but I feel assured that a close examination of the rolls of the two Houses from 1863 to 1881 would fully establish its correctness.

Not only were the two colleges founded and well sustained, but the entire educational system of the county, long before the school-tax and public schools, was comprehensive and thorough. I remember in my own boyhood that there were ten or eleven academies or select schools in the county where lads could be fitted for college. In nearly every instance the Presbyterian pastor was the principal teacher. Many who will be present at your centennial will recall the succession of well-drilled students who came for so many years from the tuition of Dr. McCluskey, of West Alexander; from the Rev. John Stockton, at Cross Creek; from the Rev. John Eagleston, at Buffalo, and from others of like worth and reputation.

It is inevitable that a county thus peopled should grow in strength, wisdom and wealth. Its sixty thousand inhabitants are favored far beyond the average lot of man. They are blessed with a fertile soil and with the health-giving climate which belongs to the charmed latitude of the fortieth parallel—the middle of the wheat and corn belt of the continent. Beyond this they enjoy the happy and ennobling influences of scenery as grand and beautiful as that which lures tourists thousands of miles beyond the sea. I have myself visited many of the celebrated spots in Europe and America, and I have nowhere witnessed a more attractive sight than was familiar to my eyes in boyhood from the old Indian Hill Farm, where I was born, and where my great-grandfather, the elder Neal Gillespie, settled before the outbreak of the Revolution. The majestic sweep of the Monongahela through the foothills of the Alleghanies, with the chain of mountains but twenty miles distant, in full view, gives an impression of beauty and sublimity which can never be effaced.

I talk thus familiarly of localities and childhood incidents because your assemblage, though composed of thousands, will in effect be a family reunion, where the only things in order will be tradition and recollection and personal history. Identified, as I have been for twenty-eight years, with a great and noble people in another section of the Union, I have never lost any of my attachment for my native county and my native State. The two feelings no more conflict than does a man's love for his wife and his love for his mother. Wherever I may be in life, or whatever my fortune, the County of Washington, as it anciently was, taking in both sides of the Monongahela, will be sacred in my memory. I shall always recall with pride that my ancestry and kindred were and are not inconspicuously connected with its history, and that on either side of the beautiful river, in Protestant and in Catholic cemeteries, five generations of my own blood sleep in honored graves.

Very sincerely yours,
JAMES G. BLAINE.

THE GREENBACK COLLAPSE.

The Plaisted-Hill-Ladd Strategy.

[Lewiston Cor. Boston Journal.]

THE PERFORMANCE OF THE PLAISTED LEADERS.

In the present condition of politics in Maine the secret history of the movement which resulted in the withdrawal of the Democratic candidate from Congress is interesting if not instructive. The first attempt to attach the Second District Democracy to the Greenback faction was made in the District Convention, but it was rejected by a decided majority with much spirit. As soon as the convention was over the Plaisted Fusionists began their efforts to get the Democratic candidate out of the way. The Portland Argus, which is outside the district, began to doubt the wisdom of Democratic action, and day after day Democratic Mrs. Harrises published letters in that paper in which they doubted the expediency of Mr. Reed's candidacy, and urged his withdrawal in favor of Mr. Gilbert, who was pledged to vote against the Democratic candidate for Speaker. This course was thoroughly demoralizing, particularly in Mr. Reed's county. Indeed, it was given out by Democrats that Mr. Reed would get less votes than would Mr. Gilbert. Last week the Plaisted managers began in earnest. Tuesday and Wednesday, Representative Ladd of the Fourth District, Mr. F. W. Hill, of Penobscot (Governor Plaisted's father-in-law-that-is-to-be and a man with brains and force equal to a half-dozen men like His Excellency), Capt. Chase of the Garcelon Council, Tom Plaisted (the Governor's cousin) and a few other Fusion lights were here to labor with the local Democratic leaders. They were entirely unsuccessful, ex-Governor Garcelon and an effete leader named Record being the only men who would hear to their proposals to withdraw the Democratic candidate. Every other man and all men who have influence in the Democratic party opposed it. Later, a larger conference was held at Bath, to which leading Democrats in all parts of the District were invited to meet the Plaisted ambassadors and the Greenback chieftains. Few Democrats, outside of Sagadahoc county attended, and I have it from a reliable Democrat that most of those who did attend, including such well-known Democrats as Dr. Fuller, C. W. Larrabee and Dr. F. W. Small, Chairman of the Bath City Committee, protested vehemently against this shameful surrender to a handful of noisy fellows calling themselves Greenbackers. It is said that Dr. Fuller declared that in case he would vote for Mr. Dingley. But Governor Plaisted's future father-in-law is determined to make His Excellency United States Senator, and he is one of the most persistent men in Maine. He was determined to carry out the programme of the Plaisted clique. Consequently, when entreaty failed, it is said that Mr. Hill and his associates resorted to bulldozing. Mr. Torrey, of Bath, an aspiring politician and manager, as well as member of the State Committee, was the only man they could work upon. Mr. Reed was some way in his hands. So Mr. Hill et al. said in effect to Mr. Torrey and his attendants: "Keep your candidate in the field and defeat the Greenback candidate and thereby injure the Fusion prospects if you will, but the Fusion party will hold you responsible for its defeat, and you will never be forgotten for your treason." Mr. Torrey aspires, and being a pleasant man and no match for one of Frank Hill's robustness, he wilted, and when he wilted and advised Mr. Reed to withdraw, Mr. Reed obeyed. Thus it appears that a half-dozen men, representing the Plaisted interest and expectation outside of the district, actually forced the retirement of the Democratic candidate. It was the most audacious thing ever attempted and consummated in Maine politics. Think of it—a little clique of political soldiers of fortune outside of this district, in spite of the protest of nineteen-twentieths of the leading Democrats who reside in it, actually force a candidate of the Democratic party to write a letter declining a nomination he had once formally accepted by letter! These facts I have from a reliable Democrat in this district.

REED WAS DRIVEN FROM THE FIELD

DEMOCRACY TORN UP.

The Democracy in this district are now thoroughly "torn up." Because of this unpleasantness, Hon. Nahum Morrill, of this county, a Democrat of ability, has resigned as a member of the State Committee, and it is reported that Major S. C. Belcher, the Democratic candidate for Congress in 1878, has or is about to tender his resignation as the Franklin county member of the Committee. The regular Democracy has an able organ in the Lewiston Gazette, which may be said to be the only Democratic paper in Maine pure and simple. It "has blood in its eye" just now. The Greenback party is a thing of the past. The leaders, however, do not know it. Perhaps yesterday's election will help them to realize the fact. A year since there were not less than a dozen Greenback papers in the State. Now there are but two, and they exist because they are local papers rather than organs. The effect of the election upon the Fusionists promises to be very important. Said one Democrat: "If we fuse hereafter, the Democrats will dictate the terms and name the candidates. This election shows that there are not 10,000 Greenbackers in the State. That sort of a tail can't wag the Democratic dog hereafter." On the whole, the Democracy is greatly demoralized, and the thinking men in the rank and file attribute it to the recreancy of their leaders. They express about the same degree of disgust for these leaders and the Greenback claimants. Reports from towns in the interior indicate that the local Democratic leaders quite generally voted for the Greenback candidate for Congress, but the rank and file revolted.

NEW MAGZISES.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for October is a remarkable Number, both for the beauty of its illustrations and the interest and importance of its varied contents.

The Number opens with a beautiful frontispiece—a full-page illustration by Abbey, entitled "With Grandpa." The leading illustrated article is by William Hamilton Gibson, and is entitled A Berkshire Road. The article and the illustration (which are from Mr. Gibson's drawings) are fully worthy of the author of Pastoral Days.

Joseph Hatton contributes the first of a series of papers on Journalistic London. Mr. Hatton opens his article with an interesting description of Fleet Street—the journalistic centre of London—discusses the comparative importance of provincial and metropolitan newspapers, the social standing of journalists, and gives some very entertaining information respecting the establishment and career of several journalistic enterprises, paying especial attention to Punch, The Field, The Queen, and The Daily News. The article is illustrated by sketches drawn by M. C. Ridley, and from photographic portraits of F. C. Burnand, J. R. Robinson, F. H. Hill, Archibald Forbes, and Justin McCarthy.

Henry Vane's article, Adirondack Days, is a charming sketch of vacation life and sport, with beautiful illustrations.

Those who saw the Bridgman collection of pictures exhibited in New York last spring, and all who are interested in American art, will give a hearty welcome to Edward Strahan's article on Frederick A. Bridgman. The author knew the artist during the early period of the latter's foreign studies, when he was in the atelier of Gerome, and his reminiscences are unusually interesting. The article is illustrated with a fine portrait, and eight engravings from Mr. Bridgman's paintings.

Charles Barnard, in The Telegraph of To-Day, gives a graphic account of recent improvements in telegraphy, with especial reference to the devices adopted diminishing the cost of telegraphic operations. It is a subject in which the people are greatly interested, and Mr. Barnard's article is clear (assisted by several illustrations) and entertaining.

Apropos of the forthcoming Cotton Exposition at Atlanta, Henry W. Grady contributes a very important article showing the possibilities of cotton production, the present defective system of cotton farming, and the outlook for the Southern manufacture of the staple. The article is illustrated by J. H. Moser, Mary Franklin, and C. Graham.

Judge C. C. Goodwin, of the Salt Lake Tribune, in his article The Mormon Situation, gives expression to the genuine alarm felt by the Gentile population of Utah on account of the growth and aggressiveness of the Mormon system.

Miss Woolson's Anne, and Thomas Hardy's A Laodicean are continued. Short stories are contributed by Kate Upson Clark and Amelia E. Barr, and the Editorial Departments are filled with timely and interesting matter.

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

We have received from the publishers, James R. Osgood & Co., Boston, the following new books which are for sale by D. Bugbee & Co:

DAMEN'S GHOST, one of the Round Robin series. Cloth; 313 pages; price $1.25.

GERALDINE, a souvenir of the St. Lawrence. This poem by an American writer, who prefers for the present to be anonymous, contains a strange story of love, passion, and retribution. The great popularity of this form of literature, as exemplified by the metrical romances of Sir Walter Scott, Owen Meredith, and Dr. Holland, gives reason to predict a wide circulation for "Geraldine." Handsomely bound; 321 pages; price $1.25.

UNFORTUNATE MICHIGAN.

Proclamation by the Governor,

APPEALING FOR ASSISTANCE.

DETROIT Sept 16 Gov Jerome has issued a proclamation to the people of the United States appealing for aid for the Michigan sufferers by the forest fires He says the destruction of property will be great in the four counties affected Whole towns have been destroyed and two hundred lives lost by the burning flames Many will become helpless through injuries and exposure

The number of persons without shelter is estimated at 15 000 The benevolence of the citizens of the State responded promptly to the first necessities of those afflicted, but it is evident that another appeal is needed Timely help will enable them to go through the coming winter and become again an independent community At present they are penniless, needy, sick and suffering and many in debt.

I appeal under circumstances like these to the people of other States and ask them to co-operate in their abundance with the citizens of Michigan in relieving this destitution Nothing will be wanting here in duty to the afflicted sufferers, but the demands are too great for the people of this State to meet alone An organization for their relief exists at Detroit and systematic plans of relief have been established

The committee having them in charge is composed of well known, competent and responsible citizens Money and supplies sent to its chairman Wm G Thompson, Mayor of Detroit, will be faithfully distributed

Unfavorable Symptoms

The President passed a fairly good night during the early part, however, he was considerably troubled with coughing more than the previous night His general condition while not materially changed is not so favorable this morning In fact he has made no gain and there has been a gradual but not very marked falling off There are no new complications or indications of any but the general condition of the patient shows he has not made any repairs the past 18 hours, hence he is not considered to be in as good condition this morning The wound has assumed a more unhealthy appearance and the discharge from it is growing more unsatisfactory since yesterday morning There is no decided difference in the discharge of this morning from that of last night but this is of no better character

Small bed sores have again appeared These Dr Boynton says are caused from his constant lying in bed and are attributable principally to the extreme debilitated condition of the patient These sores have appeared heretofore but recently they healed and for some days have not been a disturbing or annoying feature in the case The circulation of the patient Dr Boynton says, is good and his pulse is not of a more depressed or unfavorable character than it has been The anxiety is whether the President will be able to withstand the burden he is now carrying Dr Boynton says that he still has hope that he will but it is a question which can only be determined by the future

The patient's mind is also very weak and shows evidences of disturbance by continued hallucinations These conditions are apparent throughout the day and indicate that the general situation is less hopeful than it has been pictured of late There is still a continuance of the suppuration of the parotid gland On the whole the case may be summed up with the assertion that the present is a moment of extreme anxiety, and devoid of sufficient ground for assuming that the patient will overcome the excessive debility which has established itself All are hopeful however especially Dr Boynton who asserts his opinion without hesitation that the probability is that there is sufficient vitality left to override the present unfavorable symptoms, but on the other hand he is unwilling to grant there is anything to warrant a sanguine opinion to that effect

One of the President's attendants states that the perspiration which has been one of the annoying features of the President's case has reappeared Col Rockwell and Col Swaim, however, appear to entertain a different opinion and declare it has not reappeared The attendants upon the President say his quarters are perfectly comfortable and unless it should become extremely cold no apprehension is felt about keeping the cottage at a desirable temperature In order to do this it may become necessary to place a stove in the room to take the place of a grate fire It is reliably ascertained that the President's pulse reached 130 during the night but notwithstanding the fact that the febrile rise was not so pronounced as usual

[10 15 A M]

UNOFFICIAL

The situation this morning is less favorable and grave anxiety exists as to whether the President will be able to overcome the result of his extreme debility Bed sores have again appeared and the discharge from the wound is very unsatisfactory

[1 10 P M]

UNOFFICIAL

The President's condition at this hour is unchanged Attorney-General MacVeagh considers the case as warranting extreme anxiety but maintains that while there is no particular point which can be said to have developed to an alarming extent the general condition which includes the extreme debility of the patient is necessarily one of grave apprehension

[2 25 P M]

UNOFFICIAL

Dr Bliss says there was a slight febrile rise commencing at 11 o clock which remained until nearly twelve At noon the patient's pulse was 114, temperature 99 6, respiration 21 At this hour his pulse is 108 and temperature not much above normal The patient has not been placed in his chair to-day on account of the febrile rise which occurred

What the Lancet Says

LONDON Sept 16 The Lancet says the reason of the trouble with President Garfield's lungs is hypostatic congestion at their base Because of the depressed respiration arising from his long recumbency sitting up will probably give much relief, but until all signs of the affection of the lungs have disappeared the hopeful progress constantly cabled here is not well founded, although it may prove a lucky guess

New York Despatch,

NEW YORK, Sept 16 The Post's Long Branch special says Attorney General MacVeagh this morning said it was evident that a crisis of some kind was approaching and that it might be expected within forty eight hours The despatch says, 'Dr Boynton said that he now fears that the President has not sufficient vitality left to surmount the present difficulties, even if no new complications appeared "

BOSTON, Sept 16 Secretaries Hunt, James and Windom, with their wives arrived from the White Mountains to night and will leave for Long Branch to morrow forenoon.

Review of the Day

The day opened stormy and disagreeable A heavy northeast wind set in yesterday, followed by a driving rain during the night, which has continued at intervals ever since

Dr Boynton, this morning, said I slept in the room adjoining the President and noticed that he coughed considerably during the early part of the night I went into his room about four o clock and found his circulation was quite good and pulse comparatively good, but it was not a healthy strong pulse It run up during the febrile rise last night to about 135, that is customary, however

The case now is this the President is suffering from the effects of blood poisoning and is decidedly and apprehensively weak I hope he will overcome the extreme loss of strength and rally, but it is a question whether or not he will be able to do this I see a very gradual, but perceptible and sure descent in his case I feel somewhat discouraged with the outlook to day but have not lost hope nor will not as I think he is going to pull through, but it will be tedious and wear some work for him The wound commenced looking less favorable yesterday morning and has grown worse ever since

The discharge from it is of a thin and watery character, indicating the extreme weakness of the patient There are no indications of other complications excepting the reappearance of the bed sores which are noticeable again to day I do not think the patient would be able in his present debilitated condition to undergo another complication such as he has already encountered There are no fears of new complications, but of course we cannot predict what may occur in this disease It is very treacherous

Col Swaim this afternoon said he did not think the President started in as favorably this morning as yesterday, but there is no occasion for alarm He was of the opinion the depression was only temporary When spoken to about the hallucinations Col Swaim said that his wanderings of mind continued to a certain extent but were generally of brief duration The Colonel still maintains that the President will rally, ... does also Col Rockwell

To Lowell

The following was sent to-night

To Lowell, Minister at London

There has been no very marked change in the President's condition but it is not at all ... reassuring The different symptoms are almost all slightly aggravated His temperature and pulse have fluctuated more than usual and his respiration is rather more frequent while the character of the discharges continue to be unsatisfactory There is therefore a sensible increase of anxiety

(Signed) MACVEAGH

Attorney General MacVeagh's Views

Attorney General MacVeagh this afternoon expressed himself as being extremely anxious about the President's condition but said he there is in fact nothing particularly alarming in the symptoms, beyond the extreme weakness which prevails The acknowledgment of this, however Gen MacVeagh considered sufficient to warrant anxiety, notwithstanding there were no new complications He said the question as to whether or not the President can overcome the existing debility is an extremely serious one The discharge of pus from the wound the Attorney General said is not at all good being thin and more watery than healthy pus should be

The expectoration caused by the condition of the lung he thought indicated that that organ is no improving in any degree He remarked that the ups and downs would be liable to occur from the poison ... condition of the patient's blood and the chances are that the case will hold a very ... as it now for some time and also it ... that can be done is to watch and await the course of nature The Attorney General is also of the opinion that the President could not stand another relapse caused by a serious complication

What Dr Bliss Thinks

Dr Bliss said to night There was a febrile rise from 11 o clock until two and from two to six he was comparatively comfortable At six o clock another rise occurred which still continues To what it will amount to or how serious it will be I cannot now predict Dr Bliss says while he was with the President to-day he ... expressions which seemed to indicate that his mind was wandering a little and that Dr Hamilton stated this evening that he had no idea a similar ... while with the President His ... together more hazardous than at any time since the patient has been at Long Branch but no worse than just before he was moved

The ... for moving the patient was that it should be at a time when he showed ... repair or signs of failing and he was moved under the latter circumstances We don't apprehend any additional abscesses The cough has been less annoying to day but on the whole I consider him a little worse to-night

Dr Agnew went to Philadelphia this morning and returned to-night

At ten o clock to night Dr Bliss said the President's pulse decreased to 116 and his temperature was not very much above normal, and that he apprehended a reasonably quiet night, although he could not say he expected any marked improvement in the morning

Dr Hamilton Reticent

Dr Hamilton left for New York this evening but before leaving when asked about the President's condition said I refer you to bulletins for a full and complete exposition of his condition I would not expect that the public would interpret it as a favorable bulletin, or as an indication of favorable progress We have concealed nothing that we deemed unfavorable

Midnight

The President's condition causes a feeling of despondency, and the general situation cannot be denied as warranting grave apprehensions, and the probabilities are that some time will elapse before the patient will show any substantial improvement During the past 18 hours there has been a slight, but perceptible loss of strength His attacks of coughing are still severe and exhausting

He expectorates a considerable quantity of pus There is without doubt a fresh accession to the lung trouble, the amount of lung tissue involved is considerably greater than it was 15 hours ago To-night his pulse for a time reached about 130 His condition is such as to put in question his ability to rally from his present state of lung trouble and exhaustion

Attorney General MacVeagh to-night notified the members of the Cabinet of the President's condition His telegram was substantially the same as that sent to Lowell

A MAMMOTH ENTERTAINMENT

THOUSANDS VISIT BOTH AFTERNOON AND EVENING PERFORMANCES AT COLE'S CIRCUS

Most Successful and Astonishing Feats

[From the Toronto Globe]

Early yesterday morning W W Cole's circus and menagerie arrived in the city and immediately afterwards the tents were pitched on the vacant ground at the corner of Portland and King Streets The procession, which was an imposing one, started from there shortly after nine o clock, and all along the route crowds of people were in the streets to witness it

Notwithstanding the extreme heat yesterday afternoon and evening the large circus tent was filled to its utmost capacity which must have been gratifying to the management and judging from the character of the performance the number of visitors will not show a falling off at to day's performances The tent has a seating capacity for eight thousand and last night thousands had to be refused admission for want of accomodation To meet the crush for to-day seats will be provided for an extra thousand The attractions in the circus ring were numerous and varied and all the performers were perfect in their respective parts The programme opened with a cavalcade of elephants, camels, horses, knights and ladies the ring being covered with them after which two performing elephants were introduced Then followed Miss Jeal on the floating wire and Messrs Murz Dunbar and Mdlle Adelaide the Australian trio, in their aerial bicycle act and daring feats on the trapeze, which met with prolonged applause from the audience A most daring and difficult feat, which called forth bursts of applause was accomplished by one of the trio in standing on his head on the seat of the bicycle which was elevated at a considerable distance from the ground The leaping and double somersaulting by the American and Australian athletes was excellent one of the number Mr James Campbell executing a double somersault over four camels and three elephants the largest of the latter standing in the centre on top of a pedestal four feet high The various male and female equestrians performed their parts most satisfactorily The exercise on the horizontal bar by Messrs Dunbar, Livingston and Richardson the performance of W O'Dale Stephens, the equilibrist, with the electric table and enchanted cross, and the acrobatic feats of the Livington Brothers excited unbounded admiration and astonishment One of the most attractive features of the entertainment was the troop of trained stallions They went through a series of evolutions waltzed sat down, and stood or walked on their hind legs To get these splendid looking animals into such an efficient state as to make it appear as if they were endowed with reason must have required most extraordinary care and patience on the part of their trainer The large audience recognized the merit of the performances by repeated applause The trick horses ' Rumboldt and ' Hindoo ' the see-saw ponies, and the running camels and riding monkeys were also very amusing and entertaining The entrance of Conklin, the lion tamer, into the lions' cage, concluded the entertainment The clowns, T B McIntyre and Pico were good and their amusing tricks were duly appreciated, more particularly by the juveniles The tent at night is illuminated by the Brush dynamo-electric light (sixteen burners in all) which diffuses a most brilliant and dazzling light

The menagerie is well worth seeing and an hour can be profitably spent in viewing as fine a collection of animals, birds etc , as could possibly be imagined The lions are splendid specimens of the kings of the forest, and there are also tigers, hyenas a rhinoceros, a white buffalo, cassowary, monkeys, sea lion, etc. The kangaroos and emus from Australia, met with special attention, and of the most noticeable portion of the large and varied collection is the 75 white crested cockatoos in one caravan, which, when frightened, throw up their crests The herd of camels is also deserving of special mention It would take too long to enumerate the different curiosities to be seen in this magnificent collection, suffice to say that a visit to the menagerie alone is well worth the price of admission The whole affair delighted the large audiences of yesterday, and, no doubt, it will be as largely patronized to-day

This great show will exhibit in Bangor on Monday, Oct. 3d, afternoon and evening. Special excursions will be run on all railroads at greatly reduced fares

"IN THE MORNING."

TRUE INCIDENT OF THE WAR.

"Do you see that young lady in white talking with Clarke?"

The speaker was a tall, distinguished-looking man of 35, in the uniform of a cavalry colonel in the Confederate service. The time was a summer night in 1863; the place, the hotel parlor in a small village in middle Tennessee. The occasion was a "hop" given in honor of the presence of a detachment of "Forrest's Cavalry," the daring riders whose names are household words in Southern homes, from the mountains of Tennessee to the valleys of the Mississippi. The young lady referred to was a pretty, graceful girl, with dark gray eyes, waving hair of a dark reddish gold, and the exquisite complexion that accompanies it.

"Who is she?" asked the Colonel's companion.

"That is Picton's sweetheart, Miss Garnett."

"Not the same that saved his life after Shiloh?" said Capt. Barclay.

"The same," rejoined Col. Terry. "She is a little creature to do such a thing, but she did. You see she was in the neighborhood at the time of the battle, and somebody told her that Picton was killed. She went over the field and found him, badly wounded through the lungs, but still alive. She sent a boy that she had brought with her to hunt up a surgeon, and she stayed by Picton. The boy found Dr. Cowan, and when they got back Miss Garnett had raised Picton up, with his head on her breast, so that he could breathe more easily. Dr. Cowan examined the wound without moving him, and told her that he was afraid it was hopeless, for the least motion, or leaving him down again, might produce a fatal hemorrhage. If he could be kept perfectly quiet until morning and the bleeding checked during the night he might have a bare chance of pulling through. 'Well,' said the brave little woman, 'he shall be kept quiet, for I will stay just here and not let him move.' And, by George, she did; she never stirred all night, and in the morning they carried him to the nearest house, and she nursed him until he was out of danger."

"That's a sweetheart worth having," said Capt. Barclay, with a glance of admiration at the subject of their conversation.

Half an hour later Col. Terry was at Miss Garnett's side receiving a warm greeting that told that the two were fast friends.

"Tell me of all my friends in the old battalion," she said, presently.

"How many," he asked quizzically; "more than one?"

"I mean what I said," she answered, with a merry laugh and a quick, bright blush. "I have heard from one of them very recently."

"Does Charley know you are here?" asked the Colonel.

"No, it is not a week since I left Memphis. Will they join you here?"

"They?" he replied inquiringly.

"The rest of the command, I mean," she replied, blushing again.

"A portion of it may, but for that part you are particularly interested in I cannot say. You know they are with the old general, and their movements can't be counted on with any great certainty."

"They are the comets of the service," said Miss Garnett. "Quite as erratic, at all events."

"May I have the pleasure of this dance?" said the Colonel, as the band struck up a quadrille. "I know it is useless to ask you for a waltz."

The dance over, he led her to a chair, and, after a moment's gay badinage, was about to resign his place in favor of the other claimants for her smiles, when he saw a sudden ghastly pallor overspread her features.

"Miss Alice, you are ill!" he exclaimed anxiously. "Let me get you some water."

It was scarcely a moment before his return, but even then he was shocked at her white, drawn face.

"Call my sister," she said to another gentleman with her, while Col. Terry had gone for the water, and both had reached her at the same time.

"Lucy, take me home," she whispered, "I am dying."

"Oh, no, darling," said her sister, tenderly, "you will be well in the morning."

As quick as possible the carriage was called and the sick girl placed in it.

When they were just starting Col. Terry bade them good night, expressing his hope that Miss Alice would have recovered by morning. She put out her hand, and exerting her strength, said distinctly:

"Yes, I shall be well in the morning. Tell Charley—" her voice failed, and, lifting her slim white hand, loosened the flowers she wore at her breast and put them into the colonel's hand. "Give these to him—yes—in the morning." Her voice died away to a faint whisper, and her head fell back on her sister's shoulder. The lady who had acted as their chaperon hastened to apply restoratives and the carriage rolled swiftly away.

The next morning when Col. Terry called to inquire after the invalid he had no need to ask, for from the door there floated the mournful insignia of death. Shocked beyond expression, that hardy soldier turned away, unable then to even offer his services if they were needed. He went again after a while and saw Mrs. Cameron, the hostess of the sisters during their visit. From her he learned the brief details of Alice's death. Her attack had been a sudden spasm of the heart, and she had never rallied. She had not spoken but once, and they caught her lover's name, and a repetition of the words, "in the morning."

"Poor Charley, who will tell him?" groaned the Colonel when the lady's voice ceased.

"You are his best friend," she answered, "I think no one else could do it so gently."

"I can't," he replied, shaking his head. "I would rather face a battery. Why, you don't know, you can't think how his very life seems bound up in her, and now—"

They buried her next morning; six of Picton's friends carried his dead love to her grave and then came sadly back, each questioning who would bear the tidings to the gallant sabreur far away with the old brigade.

That night the order came to join the main command, and by daylight the troops were miles away. As they reached the vicinity of the appointed rendezvous a desultory firing warned them of an approaching conflict. Presently they formed themselves in the midst of a portion of the command, drawn up in a piece of woods overlooking a sloping field, which on the opposite side rose to a sharp eminence, on the brow of which was posted a Federal battery.

Farther to the right the firing had become sharper, and soon the roll of musketry swept all along the line.

"I say, Barclay," called Col. Terry, as that officer passed him, "have you seen Picton yet?" And as Barclay shook his head, added, "Tell the boys not to let him know yet. Wait till this is over."

"All right; I'll tell them," answered Barclay, as he rode away.

"The old general will be wanting that battery the first thing they know," said one of the men, as a shell exploded over their heads. "They had better keep it quiet."

"Thar, what did I tell you?" he added, biting off a huge piece of "long-green;" "thar go the Mississippi boys now."

As he spoke a tawny column moved out of the woods and swept gallantly across the field. But as they reached the centre a murderous round of grape and canister tore through their ranks and the column broke in confusion. Three times their leader rallied them to the charge, and three times they were shattered by the galling fire.

"Tell you what, boys," called out the private who had before spoken, "that's fun comin' now! That's Gang's bugle. The 'old regiment' want some of the pie!"

He stooped and felt his saddle girth as he spoke, then straightened himself and waited for the command, for he was "one of the boys." The next moment there was a ringing cheer from the ranks as Gen. Forrest rode up.

"Boys," he exclaimed, pointing with his sword, "I want that battery captured. One regiment has tried, and couldn't take it. Now I want you boys to do better than that. I am going to lead you, and I want you all to follow me."

Another cheer was the answer, as the men fell into ranks.

"Charge!" and down the slope rode the gallant "old regiment," never faltering as the grape shot swept through the serried ranks, closing each gap as it was made by the deadly fire; on, on, following the lead of the tall figure at the head of the column, till they rode right over the deathdealing guns, grabbing the gunners there," and the woods gave back the ringing echoes of the famous 'rebel-yell' as the victory was won.

Won! Yes, but at a fearful cost. That fatal slope was drenched with the blood of the Southland's bravest sons.

After that charge Col. Terry found himself face to face with Charley Picton. "My God, how can I tell him?" muttered the colonel to himself as the gallant young fellow rode toward him, holding out his hand.

"It takes the 'old regiment' to do up things in style!" he said, grasping the colonel's hand. "Say, Terry, did you see Miss Alice? Coleman has just got back from Memphis, and he told me she had gone on a visit to some friends in C—."

But as he spoke he suddenly put his hand to his side. "I am shot," he gasped, faintly. It was true. A stray bullet had struck him in the side, and Col. Terry caught him as he reeled in his saddle and rode with him to the field hospital.

When the surgeon examined the wound he shook his head doubtfully.

"I know a nurse worth twenty doctors," whispered Picton with a smile. "Terry, can't you fetch her to me?"

Through the night the colonel stayed with him. Once he weakened and repeated the question he had asked just before he was shot.

"I saw her, yes," the colonel answered huskily. "She sent you some flowers."

The blue eyes lighted up with a tender glow, and Picton held out his hand.

Silently Col. Terry took from his breast pocket the withered flowers, a spray of ivy and a half-opened white rose, and laid them in the outstretched hand.

The wounded man slept. But in a couple of hours he awoke, much worse, and the surgeon in his rounds told the bronzed watcher that the end was very near.

"Terry!" and the colonel bent his head to catch the faint accents. "I'm dying, I wouldn't mind—only—poor Alice! Tell her gently, Tell her—she loves me, you know—and I, oh, Terry! it is hard to leave her. My poor darling."

For a moment the colonel could not answer. Then, choking back a sob, he said, slowly and distinctly:

"Charley, Alice is waiting for you. You are not leaving her, but going to her."

A bewildered, troubled look came into the wistful blue eyes.

"Don't you understand me, Charley? She is dead. We buried her there in C—. I couldn't tell you before, dear old boy. But now you will be with her before you have time to grieve after her. She died with your name on her lips, murmuring of meeting you in the morning."

He understood now, and a smile of relief flitted across his pale lips. "Dear girl," he murmured, "I am so glad she will not have this grief to bear."

Then he slept again and the hours passed on until the eastern sky brightened with the solemn dawn light.

"Terry!" The word was but the faintest whisper, but the watcher instantly bent his head to listen.

"It is morning," came the faint, gasping accents, and again the white lids drooped over the blue eyes. Five—ten minutes passed. Then Col. Terry lifted the dead hands and crossed them over the pulseless breast, reverently covered the still, white face and turned away.

His two friends had met once more—"in the morning" of a fadeless day.—Courier-Journal.

The Surgeon's Knife.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their re-formation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases. It is equally valuable in cases of Bilious Disorders, Constipation of the Bowels, and in the class of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. The Doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.
